5.0 Strategic Issues

5.1 Issue One: Economic Security

Thoughtful consideration was given to the strategic directions of Government as communicated by the Minister responsible for the Status of Women and the public issues affecting the status of women. As a result, the Advisory Council has identified economic security as a strategic issue. Poverty and economic instability are systemic barriers for many women throughout our province and efforts to address these issues are key components in advancing the status of women.

The Advisory Council recognizes the increasing number of opportunities for women entering the skilled trades and technologies, but also acknowledges that women continue to be under-represented in many types of employment within the emerging resource sector. In partnership with the Provincial Government, industry and community organizations, the Advisory Council supports the implementation of policies and strategies to encourage women to get training, and to secure and retain employment in the skilled-trades, technologies and other traditionally male-dominated sectors.

Natural resource development projects, such as the Lower Churchill Development and Hebron, provide not only employment, but also business opportunities for women of the province. Through participation in a round table of Government officials and stakeholder representatives, the Advisory Council seeks to promote supplier-diversity, and support the participation of and understand opportunities for women-owned businesses in the various projects.

Advancing women in leadership is another key component in addressing women’s economic security. Women continue to be under-represented in senior leadership and decision making positions within governments and corporations, and represent the minority on agencies, boards and commissions. The Advisory Council continues to provide advice to the Government of Newfoundland and Labrador that will contribute to participation in leadership roles.

Violence continues to be a systemic barrier to women’s equality. Justice services, housing, safety, leadership at all levels from community to political participation, family, healthy relationships, youth development, social media, healthcare, cultural and environmental sustainability are all critical social security elements that help reduce violence and contribute to women’s equality. Social security is the cornerstone to living in positive and safe communities.

The Advisory Council will continue to work in tandem with a host of community groups and government departments to bring forward social issues for women in the province. Throughout this three-year cycle, the Advisory Council will develop advice based on the analysis of women’s diverse needs in the province. Advice will address the social security needs of women that contribute to ending violence and advancing equality.
